AJP Layout Style

Authors should take the appearance of a recent article in the printed version of the Journal as a rough guide for the production and layout of a finished typescript. The following general pattern must be followed in production of a final version for the Editor:

TITLE

Author(s)

Abstract

Key Words (if any)

1. Introduction

Text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text Text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text

Footnote (NOT endnote).

2. What Does a Logical Constant Mean?

Text text text text text text text text text text text text text text text . . . as we see in the following remarks:

> Blockquote
>
> [source year: page]
